THE Neutrality to be obſerved about the Place for Treating a Peace between the Emperor and his Allies, and the Grand Signior, having been publiſhed at Peter-Waradin and Belgrade, to the great Satisfaction of all Parties, my Lord Paget, Ambaſſador from his Majeſty of Great Britain, left the Turkiſh Camp on the 19th inſtant, and came over the Save in the Order following: Firſt marched an Alai Beg with about 50 Horſe, then 60 Chiaux on Horſeback, his Excellency's Guard of Janizaries, 330 Foot-Soldiers, an Aga with his Servants, and 6 Domeſtick Janizaries; after whom were carried two Flags, one with the Arms of England, and the other a White Banner with a Red Croſs; next came ſix Led-Horſes of my Lord Ambaſſador's with very rich Furniture, my Lord's Gentleman of the Horſe, and his Interpreter; Then his Excellency on Horſeback, preceeded by two other Interpreters on Horſeback, and attended by two Heydukeson each ſide his Horſe in their Country-Dreſs, and by 10 Tſhohadars in white Veſts, with their Carabines upon their Shoulders, my Lord Ambaſſador's Brother, attended by 6 Tſhohadars in like manner, and then followed his Excellency's Chaplain and his Secretary, and two Engliſh Gentlemen and ſix Pages on Horſeback. Then followed my Lord Ambaſſador's Coaches, and after them marched the reſt of his Servants, all on Horſeback two by two; and 20 Mules, 50 Camels, and 20 Waggons, which carried his Excellency's Tents and Baggage, cloſed the March. Upon his Excellencies paſſing over the Save-Bridge, which was lined with Janizaries, he was ſaluted with 3 Guns from the Caſtle, and as he paſſed by the Turkiſh Gallies, Saicks, and Frigats, each of them fired one Gun. About half way to Semlin, the Chiauxes and others who were ſent by the Grand Viſier to attend his Excellency, made a Halt, and having taken leave of his Excellency, returned back to the Turkiſh Camp. The Dutch Ambaſſador followed about an hour after in like manner. On the 21ſt their Excellencies arrived at Cruſhedall. The ſame day the Venetian Ambaſſadors came to Futack, and the Muſcovite Ambaſſador to Peter-Waradin. There was ſome Difficulty concerning the form of the Paſſes to be mutually given by the Imperialiſts and the Turks; but the Mediators, to accommodate this Buſineſs, propos'd, That ſeeing the Ambaſſadors did not paſs through any Country but what was already in a ſolemn manner declared to be neuter, there would be no need of any other Paſſes than what the Mediators might be empowered to give to ſuch of the Ambaſſadors Servants as might have occaſion to go up and down within the Limits of the Neutrality agreed on by both ſides; which was conſented to by all Parties. The 25th the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors, who ſet out from Belgrade 3 days before, came to a Village called Warwodicky, and pitched their Tents within 2 hours march of the Mediators, and the ſame day the Ambaſſadors from the Emperor and the Allies arrived at this Place, where they deſigned to have continued, it being at the ſame diſtance from Cruſhedall; but there happening ſome Difference between the Ambaſſadors of Poland and Muſcovy about the Ground they had choſen to pitch their Tents in, and it being alſo conſidered that the Days were ſhort, and the Plenipotentiaries Quarters being ſo far aſunder, much time would be loſt in going to and fro; It was agreed, That the Mediators ſhould remove hither; That the Allies ſhould encamp about a quarter of an hours march from hence towards Peter-Waradin, and the Turks at the ſame diſtance towards Belgrade, which was done accordingly. Upon the Mediators arrival here, the German Gariſon was drawn up, and a Captain, Lieutenant, and Cornet, with 50 Horſe, and a Captain, Lieutenant, and Enſign with 70 Foot, were appointed for a Guard to each of them, beſides the Turkiſh Guard who attended their Excellencies by Order of the Grand Viſier. The following Days were ſpent by the ſeveral Ambaſſadors in paying the cuſtomary Viſits; and this Day their Powers are to be exchanged in the uſual manner, in order to begin the Conferences for the Treaty of Peace; to which all Parties ſeem ſo well diſpoſed, that we have reaſon to hope it will be concluded in a ſhort time.

Vienna, Novemb. 5. Yeſterday morning we received Advice by an Expreſs, That the Ambaſſadors from the Emperor and his Allies had removed their Tents from Carlowitz, a quarter of a League nearer to Peter-Waradin. The Mediators were encamped at Carlowitz, and the Turks about a quarter of a League beyond it: On the 30th of the laſt Month their ſeveral Powers were mutually exchanged, and the uſual Viſits having
